—Rookie Tommy Agee singled home the winning run with one out in the 10th inning to hand Chicago a 4-3 triumph over Minnesota.

In the other games, he White Sox swept the Twins, winning a nightcap 7-4 in 11 innings. Washington shaded Cleveland 3-2.

In the National League, Los Angeles topped San Francisco 5-3 after losing 2-1. Cincinnati bested Philadelphia 5-2. Atlanta ripped New York 4-4 and Houston edged Chicago 4-3.

outings by identical 1-0 scores, permitted Norm Casch, 23rd home run but otherwise coasted to his 10th victory in 19 decisions. Joe Pepitone slammed his 20th homer for the Yankees, who handed Mickey Lolich his 10th loss against 13 triumphs.

Calvarria led off the sixth inning with a double—the first hit allowed by California starter Fred Newman. Phil Roof sent Calvarria home with the first run of the game and eventually scored the second run of the stanza on Larry Saito's single.

Nash, who began his big league career with seven straight victories, limited the Angels to six hits in raising his slate to 9-1 for the ninth-place A's.

Brandon left the game with two out and two on in the ninth inning. Reliever John Wyatt retired Brooks Robinson on a pop-up to preserve Brandon's fifth triumph in 12 decisions. The Orioles, who lead the second-place Tigers by 12½ games, held a 2-1 advantage before Tony Conigliaro's single scored Jose Tartabull in the fifth and Poy's safety valved George Smith in the seventh for Boston.

Walker Press Cautious
With two out in the sixth inning of the first game, Minnesota pitcher Pete Cramer 1-5 walked Wayne Causey and Smokey Burgess and Agee followed with his game-winning single. The Twins won about 3-1 in the 11th but Chicago tied the score with another two-out rally. Joel Horlen 3-12 held the Twins hitless for 3 2-3 innings to record the victory.

In the nightcap, Jerry Adair's lead-off homer—in the 11th inning—his fourth of the season—provided Chicago with the twelfth sweep.

Tony Oliva slammed a three-run homer for Minnesota and Harmon Killebrew, who connected in the first game, hit a two-run blast.

Jim King's single with two out in the last of the ninth scored pinch hitter Willie Kirkland from second to give the Senators their fifth straight triumph and a sweep of the three-game series with Cleveland. Kirkland walked with one out, went to second on Bob Saverani's infield hit and came home on King's bouncer to center. Dick Howser homered for the Indians.

Billy O'Dell Makes A Big Jump From College To Majors, Asked To Make Another As Starter

By CURT BLOCK

UPI Sports Writer

Billy O'Dell, who successfully made the jump from the college campus to the big leagues, now is being asked to complete a shorter trek—from the bullpen to the starting lineup.

The veteran southpaw, one of the National League's leading relief artists, made his 50th appearance of the year and first as a starter Sunday when Pittsburgh manager Harry Walker was strapped for a healthy arm.

Walker had no alternative after St. Louis had taken the first game 3-2 and kayped the Pirates starting pitcher for the 19th time in the last 30 games.

O'Dell, who joined the Baltimore Orioles directly from the Clemson University campus in 1964 and started in the majors with the Pirates, was called on to pitch for his 100th career win that boosted the Blues back into a tie for first place with San Francisco.

Plugs The Gap
The 33-year-old O'Dell, who, like Sandy Kousser, Al Kaline, Dick Groat and Ernie Banks, has never played in the minors, didn't go to the route himself but he was able to plug the gap for Walker with 3 1-3 innings of one run ball. Pete Misker rescued his bullpen colleague, giving up two hits over the final 3 2-3 frames.

The win, combined with the Dodgers' 5-2 victory over the Giants, left Pittsburgh and San Francisco deadlocked with identical 75-54 records. It also placed Los Angeles one game back with a 74-54 mark.

In other NL games, Houston edged Chicago 4-3. Cincinnati topped Philadelphia 5-2 and Atlanta beat New York 4-4.

In the American League, Chicago took two extra inning games from Minnesota, winning 4-3 in 15 innings and 7-6 in 11. Boston beat Baltimore 3-2. New York defeated Detroit 8-1. Washington nipped Cleveland 3-2 and Kansas City downed California 2-1.

O'Dell, who started only once in 62 games with the Braves last year, was lifted once the Cards scored so that he'll be ready for duty again soon. The Pirates backed up his fifth win in nine decisions with a four run rally in the top of the sixth that highlighted by Roberto Clemente's two-run double.

Start Early
St. Louis tallied two runs in the opening inning of the first game off Vernon Law on Lou Brock's single, a triple by Ted Savage and Orlando Cepeda's infield out. Phil Cagliano singled home the winning run in the seventh.

Don Sutton 11-11 gave up five hits and fanned seven while beating the Giants. Los Angeles' Gene Luten by Willie Davis, Jim Lefebvre and Ron Fairly were included in a 12-hit Dodger attack. Sutton needs 40 more strikeouts to pass Grover Alexander's record for a rookie—227 in 1911. Gaylord Perry 20-4, lost his second straight decision.

Jim Maloney and Don Nottebart allowed five Philadelphia hits as Cincinnati won its fifth in a row behind a 13-hit spree that included Vada Pinson's 14th homer. Maloney 14-4 gave up three safeties in six innings and left the game when he aggravated an old knee injury.

Felipe Alou and Joe Torre contributed three hits apiece to Atlanta's total of 12 and Eddie Mathews and Rico Carty both homered and drove in two runs. Reliever Clay Carroll 5-6 got the win and Met starter Dennis Ribant suffered the loss, his sixth against nine victories.

Joe Morgan singled home Ron Davis in the fourth inning with the run that made the difference in Houston's win over Chicago. Morgan's hit followed singles by John Bateman and Davis and helped Larry Dierker win his seventh game. Byron Browne and Billy Williams homered for the Cubs.

BAY OF TRAITORS

WHAT IS HAPPENING
The freighter Satander is heading for Australia, but a mysterious force is working to alter the ship's course and reduce her speed. "What do you make of it?" Hanson asked. "Sierra was a long time in saying, 'I don't know,'" Hanson eyed the chart, his gaze fixed on the positions of ship and storm one minute, on the stiffening, wind-driven seas the next. The Satander quivered as they moved aside a huge shock of leaping water. In the next instant the wet sky joined the sea in a solid slate-gray wall of rain that reduced visibility to nothing. Then a hard gust blew in and the deluge no longer came astern. It was driven horizontally across ship and sea. Sierra looked at the clock. It was time for the bell to sound the half hour. Hanson stood with hands behind him, flexing his fingers. With the stroke of the bell, he said, "If we wait for Mr. Ellsberg to pass the course—"

CHAPTER 10
The ship's bell announced three o'clock in the afternoon with six rapid strokes. The Satander plowed obediently into steadily mounting seas, her course still the same, her speed unchanged. An hour had crept by since news of the captain's sudden illness spread to all parts of the vessel. The first and only report had come from one of the sailors who had carried a shipmate suffering from exhaustion into the saloon: "Mr. Ross comes in so excited that Gus the steward nearly spilled a fancy drink in the sexy broad's lap, and Mr. Ross says to Mr. English who'd brought Charlie out of a faint that the Old Man had passed out and would be come quick. So off they go like a pair of shrikes in a gale of wind."

Officers Sierra and Hanson exchanged troubled glances and, as if by common consent, sauntered off to the chartroom. Each was trying to adjust the sudden turn of events of the afternoon in his mind. There was more than the Old Man's condition to worry about now. Both were shocked and puzzled by Ellsberg's behavior after they had reported to him on the bridge all that had been done medically. When they had finished, Ellsberg proceeded to remind Sierra that he had exceeded his authority in opening the medicine chest, that command of the ship had automatically passed to the chief mate with the captain's inability to perform the duties of his office. Furthermore, they should have notified him at once of Knapp's condition. Next he demanded the key to the medicine chest. All without one word of regret or sympathy for the captain. It wasn't at all like the friendly Ellsberg whom they respected and admired. But worse, and they were unable to reconcile his conduct to the man or the weather, he had ignored the captain's last order to alter the ship's course and reduce her speed. "What do you make of it?" Hanson asked. "Sierra was a long time in saying, 'I don't know,'" Hanson eyed the chart, his gaze fixed on the positions of ship and storm one minute, on the stiffening, wind-driven seas the next. The Satander quivered as they moved aside a huge shock of leaping water. In the next instant the wet sky joined the sea in a solid slate-gray wall of rain that reduced visibility to nothing. Then a hard gust blew in and the deluge no longer came astern. It was driven horizontally across ship and sea. Sierra looked at the clock. It was time for the bell to sound the half hour. Hanson stood with hands behind him, flexing his fingers. With the stroke of the bell, he said, "If we wait for Mr. Ellsberg to pass the course—"

"I know," Sierra broke in, a note of irritation in his voice. "He'll be guilty of disobedience to orders. I'm gambling he's not that kind of officer."

They could only wait and see. At five minutes before eight bells, 4 P. M., Ellsberg followed the usual procedure in turning the watch over to Hanson. He gave the weather changes, the ship's speed, as well as routine instructions regarding heavy weather, steering, lookouts, etc., omitting only the reading of orders from the captain. Then he completed the businesslike ceremony of "passing the course" by saying: "Course two two zero, Mr. Hanson."

Hanson repeated it, then stepped to the weather side in front of Ellsberg. Sierra, who had witnessed this, realized that he had misjudged the man. He did not have long to dwell upon the fact, for Ellsberg was saying they should look in on the Old Man before checking the port-quarter repairs.

"Well, what's detaining you, Mr. Sierra?"

A moment later, Sierra replied, "Nothing, sir," and followed the chief mate below.

Once in the captain's quarters, Ellsberg went to Knapp's side and stood a minute or two in study of the unconscious man. Turning slowly, he gave Malcolm English a long, searching glance and asked for a report on the patient's condition. English obliged him, and Ellsberg continued to study him, sharply suspiciously. Then he turned abruptly and walked to the door. Suddenly he spun around and said:

"Mr. English, who informed you of the captain's condition?"

With English's reply, he jerked his glance around to Ross.

"And how did you know about it, mister?"

Ross was stammering forth a reply when Sierra spoke up. "Mr. Hanson, Ross and I were here, sir. Captain Knapp had us here to discuss weather and ask for our opinions on our course and speed."

"Go on," Ellsberg ordered, his eyes boring into Sierra's. "And your opinions were?"

"Well, sir, we were for slowing her and putting her on a southerly course."

"Sure, Mr. Sierra. Now let's have the rest of it."

"That's about it, sir. Except—well, he had no sooner called you than he passed out."

"I see. And why, Mr. Sierra, did the three of you wait a full quarter hour before notifying me?"

"Why, sir, we were all helping Mr. English. Besides, we were too concerned about the captain to think of anything else."

"And now you're concerned about something else, aren't you? Suppose you tell me what it is, Mr. Sierra." A silence followed. "How about you, Mr. Ross?"

As Ross opened his mouth to reply, Sierra said, "We're wondering why you didn't change the course and speed, sir."

Ellsberg smiled. The ice seemed to melt in his eyes as he looked from one of the officers to the other. "Of course you're wondering about this. You're damn good men, both of you, and I'm glad to have your kind around with me. The same goes for Joe Hanson." Stroking his black beard, he said, "Now why didn't I obey orders? Because I was, and I still am, feeling 'old'—these port-quarter plates. Does that satisfy you?"

It did not, and the silence in the wake of his question told him as much. He didn't know that Captain Knapp had pointed out to them log entries, specific dates in which orders to repair the plates had been passed on to and ignored by the next in command, but he was aware that something had come between him and these officers.

English felt the gathering tension. As it seemed to hang in packed layers, awaiting only a spark to set it off, the heavy silence was broken by a gasping, guttural sound. English whirled and looked at the patient. Seeing the unparalyzed eye open, he turned the captain's head to the right and gave him water.

"It's a conscious gentleman, but must remain undisturbed. I suggest you leave and return later."

Captain Knapp tried to speak again. Failing, he managed to lift his left arm and bring a finger to his ear before pointing a finger at Ellsberg. He was trying to tell them something, English realized.

planted Sun Flower seed, gourds, etc.

Second oldest in Alaska reports he has mononucleosis. Takes rest to cure this up so they put him in the hospital for several days.

In the closing day of World War II a group of American prisoners in Europe heard the rumor that the Jewish soldiers among them were to be separated from the others for "special treatment". All the men in the camp were talking about it. The Jewish boys urged their buddies not to stick their necks out for them. The following day when the command was given, "All prisoners of Jewish blood step forward", every single soldier stepped out.

On one of Dwight L. Moody's trips across the Atlantic ocean a fire broke out in the hold of the ship. The crew and some volunteers stood in line and made a human chain to pass buckets of water.

One man who knew Moody came to him in high excitement and shouted "Let's go to the other end of the ship and pray." "No, let's pray right here" replied the evangelist. "That way we can help pass buckets too."

More on rising hospital costs. The Commercial Appeal Sunday had a front page story which quoted several people in the hospital and insurance field and it was similar to the report that Robert Wilson, local hospital administrator, made to the city council last Thursday.

Here are the five points made in the Commercial Appeal story which point up reasons for rising hospital costs:

1. Imminent passage by Congress of a bill extending the minimum wage scale to hospitals.
2. Hospital will have to come up to a minimum pay of $12.50 an hour, he said. "When they go up to that minimum all now above that scale will have to go up proportionately. It doesn't mean just bringing porters up to $12.50. Every one else will get that 25 per cent raise."
3. Government action to include hospital employees under unemployment insurance.
4. The drive nurses are putting on throughout the country for more money.
5. Rising expenses in connection with Medicare.

So there you are in a nut shell.

Get Answers From Teacher, Or Principal

By DAVID NYDICK

UPI Education Specialist
Parents who have questions concerning school should not hesitate to seek answers from the teacher, principal or other school personnel. Since each child is an individual with his own abilities, interests, needs and problems, both you and he are entitled to some very specific professional guidance rather than broad general advice from friends and neighbors.

As readers of this column you are probably aware that my advice has always included the suggestion that you carefully consider your individual child. Much depends upon his particular development and emotional makeup. Where one child may be quite able and ready to make his own independent decisions, another child of similar age and intelligence may need a great deal of guidance and encouragement to make a decision.

Use Specialists

Too often parents for one reason or another do not take advantage of the professional talent available in the schools. In addition, the teacher and principal can be extremely helpful. They keep your child and have available his records and evaluations from past years. They can put you in contact with the proper persons to help you and your child.

Several general questions from readers appear to be particularly appropriate for this time of the year.

Question:
My son, Robert, graduated from high school this past June. He had decided not to attend college but rather to obtain a job on which he would receive some technical training. During the summer he has disposed this with myself and several other people, such as our priest and physician.

Robert has now decided to attend college for a number of reasons. His father and I feel that since he reached this decision through his own efforts and appears to sincerely want a college education, it would be proper for us to assist him in any way we can.

Money No Problem

Since money is not a problem and his high school education was college preparatory and his grades were sound, we have only one question. Isn't it too late for September admission?

Answer:
No. Many colleges still have openings for qualified candidates. Speak to the school guidance department and they will be able to help you. It is good to see your son making such a wise decision even though it is somewhat late. With quick action on your part, he will still gain admission to some college although it may not be in the exact location that you or he desired. Good luck.

Question:
I have just moved to a new neighborhood and would like to register my child in school. How can I find out which school he is to attend?

Answer:
You might ask your neighbor where his child goes. This will probably be the school you are seeking. For a definite answer go to the nearest school, the superintendent's or Board of Education offices and you will receive the proper directions. Do this immediately so that the school has time to properly prepare for your child.

Novel Touches Help Spark A Setting

By JOAN O'SULLIVAN

THE FIRST faint stirrings of discontent that mark the advent of a new season are in the air.

They take many forms. With women, the two main ones are a longing for chic, dark fall fashions and a mad desire to "do" something about the way the house looks.

Think It Over: The main thing to "do" about the house right at this minute is to think about it. Wait until coolish weather sets in to stay before you start hefting pianos around or running up curtains for six sets of odd-sized windows.

While you're thinking, concentrate on decorating problems and dream up some novel touches. There's food for pleasant speculation in these offbeat suggestions:

Dreary Door: If that swinging door leading out to the kitchen bugs you, deck it out in a decorative way. Staple or glue fabric—inexpensive burlap is a good choice—to the door. Make "panels" with narrow rayon gimp in a contrasting color to match rug or wall. Add round curtain holdbacks to make unusual "doorknobs."

Shades of Pop Art: Anyone can be a pop artist and paint a way-out design of stripes and squares. Paint them black on a plain white windowshade, then add a few rows of ball fringe for a dimensional look. Continue the pop art motif by painting a wire cake rack black, then mount it on a white cardboard "frame" with black ball fringe.

The ideas are kooky but look cute and are sure to provoke comment.

Fancy and Feminine: Make a little girl's room the talk of the town by whipping up an Australian shade in crisp checked gingham. Special tape checked gingham on flat but shirs when you pull the strings inserted in it—makes the job breezy.

Carry out the motif by shirring a matching canopy for over her bed and bordering her bedspread with shirred scalloped, too.

Brighten the Outlook: Paste a scenic wallpaper on a small wall area, then frame the "view" with shutters to make a false window.

Past-On Appliques: Make plain windowdrapes part of the decorative scheme by applying appliques with paste. Try vegetable or fruit cut-outs for the kitchen; flowers for the bedroom; animals or storybook figures for the nursery; fish for the bathroom.

Dress Up A Wall: Take a yard of decorative fabric, stitch channels to top and bottom back for rods and hang it—just like a tapestry.

CURTAIN, CANOPY and shirred spread are achieved with tape that sews on flat, shirs up when you pull strings.

Long Look: Give a short window a long look by allowing café curtains to hang past the sill right to the floor. Eye-Catching Camouflage: Buy adhesive-backed plastic in patterns that suit your kitchen and bathroom. Use the plastic to cover up unsightly commercial-decked containers of hair spray, scouring powder, cleansing tissues and the like. Brighten An Indoor Garden: If potted flower pots look dingy, give them a bright wrapping of aluminum foil or a coat of colorful paint. Sometimes just one small touch can pick up a room and give it a fresh look, so plot a change. Even a minor one brings a sense of satisfaction that's good for morale.

FABRIC-COVERED door is trimmed with rows of rayon gimp. Holdbacks, attached to door, serve as doorknobs.

BOLD BLACK and white art design is painted on window shade. "Paintings" on wall are wire cake racks.

ELECTIONEERING IN SAIGON—A young Vietnamese miss displays a multi-colored poster which urges voters to cast their ballots in South Viet Nam's election Sept. 11 because "Each Ballot Is a Brick to Build Democracy." The poster depicts a ballot box with hands inserting votes, and below, a "Foundation for National Democracy" which is being built from "bricks" labeled "Rural Development," "A New Society" and "Victory Over Communism." South Vietnamese will elect 108 citizens and another nine will be chosen by tribal custom to write a new constitution.

Name's the Same — What About It?

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: How does a person go about getting her name changed legally? I am taking an awful ribbing.

VIRGINIA WOOLF
DEAR VIRGINIA: If you're single you could get married. If you're married, you could get divorced and ask the court to give you back your maiden name. But it's hardly worth it. What's in a name? Just don't answer when somebody cries, "WOLF!"

DEAR ABBY: I cannot keep my mind on my work. All I can think of is that letter you published from a soldier who is returning home from Viet Nam, asking you what to do about a wife who refused to go with him to his new tour of duty.

Abby, how I wish I could spend just one hour with that wife. Maybe if she experienced the following she would change her mind:
(1) Having a government car pull up in front of her house, bearing two men who have come to tell her that her husband had been killed in action.
(2) Hearing the taps played for the last time, and feeling each note tear up every dream she ever had.

(3) Having the last letters she sent to her husband returned to her, marked UNCLAIMED.
I could tell her how it feels because I have just experienced all these things. I am not bitter. I just thank God that I had a chance to bring a little love into his life.

If I were that soldier's wife I would be waiting at the station with my bags packed, ready to follow him to the ends of the earth. But first, I would take his hand and lead him to the nearest chapel where I would kneel and thank God for sparing his life. And I would thank Him every day from that day forward.

I hope you publish this letter and that soldier's wife reads it. She is the richest woman alive.

DEAR ABBY: A cousin of mine who lives in another town is being married and I received an invitation to her wedding. This cousin told me I could bring my boy friend. I asked him and he said he wouldn't go unless he received a mailed invitation. Abby, my cousin has only seen him once or twice, and she hardly knows him. I doubt if she even knows his last name.

I think my boy friend is being very stubborn and silly to insist on mailed invitation under these circumstances. What should I do?

DEAR ABBY: In less time than it took you to write to me, you could have written your cousin a postcard, telling her your boy friend's name and address, and requesting that she send him an invitation. If you want your boy friend to accompany you, do it. (P.S. He sounds pretty square to be so "formal.")

CONFIDENTIAL TO "SO IN LOVE" IN AUSTIN: I think you're making a big mistake. The only married man worth waiting for is your own husband.
